About the Summit

Theme: East Meets Algorithm: The Future of ADR in Asia's Digital Wave

Date: 21–24 August 2025

Venue: Nanning, GuangXi, China

The Asia ADR Summit returns for its second edition with renewed vision and momentum. Organized by the Asian Institute of Alternative Dispute Resolution (AIADR) in collaboration with Guangxi University and the Nanning Arbitration Commission, the 2025 Summit is set against the backdrop of a rapidly digitizing world and shifting global conflict dynamics.

Themed “East Meets Algorithm: The Future of ADR in Asia's Digital Wave,” this year's Summit explores how technologies such as AI, blockchain, online dispute resolution (ODR), and smart contracts are reshaping alternative dispute resolution across Asia and beyond. As digital transformation permeates economies and legal systems, ADR must innovate to stay relevant, inclusive, and effective.

Hosted in Nanning, GuangXi, China—a strategic city bridging ASEAN and China—the Summit provides a timely platform to foster cross-border cooperation. In an era of rising trade disputes and regional tension, trusted ADR frameworks are essential to promoting stability and economic resilience.

Over four days, international and regional experts, practitioners, policymakers, and academics will gather for keynote speeches, panels, workshops, and networking sessions. The Summit will spotlight both enduring principles and emerging trends in mediation, arbitration, ODR, and hybrid mechanisms, reflecting Asia's diversity and its growing global influence.

About the Organizers

ASIAN INSTITUTE OF ALTERNATIVE
RESOLUTION

Delivering Excellence in ADR

The Asian Institute of Alternative Dispute Resolution (AIADR) is the first not-for-profit, member-based Asian center dedicated to advancing Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR). Established in April 2018, AIADR was launched by His Excellency Prof. Dr. Kennedy Gastorn, former Secretary General of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organisation (AALCO), and Datuk Professor Sundra Rajoo, President of the AIADR Council.

AIADR is committed to promoting ADR through accessible and affordable education, capacity building, and professional development. With a primary focus on Asia and Africa—expanding to Central and South America—the Institute serves as a global platform for fostering best practices, enhancing dispute resolution expertise, and supporting economic growth by minimizing conflicts.

Unlike traditional ADR institutions that are often regional or national-centric, AIADR is designed to be an inclusive think-tank, bridging gaps and creating opportunities for emerging economies. By emphasizing cultural sensitivities in business and dispute resolution, AIADR champions a truly international approach, empowering underrepresented regions through training, networking, and collaboration.

As Asia, Africa, and Central America increasingly drive global economic growth—further propelled by initiatives like the Belt & Road Initiative—AIADR is at the forefront of supporting businesses, investors, and stakeholders in navigating disputes efficiently and ensuring the success of cross-border projects.

AIADR's mission is to accelerate the global adoption of ADR by fostering international cooperation, strengthening dispute resolution frameworks, and enhancing access to justice through innovative and practical solutions.

About the Organizers

LAW SCHOOL OF GUANGXI UNIVERSITY

The predecessor of the Law School of Guangxi University was the Law Department of the former Guangxi University School of Liberal Arts and Law. Established in 1937, the department began enrolling students in February of that year.

The school was granted the authority to confer master's degrees in the first-level discipline of law in 2007, along with the LL.M. degree. In 2011, it was selected as part of the Ministry of Education's first batch of bases for training applied and interdisciplinary legal talents. In 2019, its law program was recognized as a national first-class undergraduate program. In 2021, it was included in the Ministry of Education's first cohort of "New Liberal Arts" initiatives.

Currently, the Law School has 41 full-time faculty members, 648 undergraduate students, and 567 master's students. It hosts three key research platforms: the Guangxi Autonomous Region Key Base for Humanities and Social Sciences, the Legislative Research Base of the Standing Committee of the Guangxi Autonomous Region People's Congress, and the Procuratorial Theory Research Base of the Guangxi Autonomous Region People's Procuratorate.

Over the past five years, the school has undertaken 36 provincial and ministerial research projects, including major initiatives funded by the National Social Science Foundation, the China Law Society, the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Justice, and the Guangxi Philosophy and Social Sciences program. Faculty members have published over 40 academic papers in Chinese Social Sciences and other leading law journals.

In the last four decades, the school has trained more than 7,500 graduates at both bachelor's and master's levels. Many alumni have gone on to excel in legal practice and education, with a number rising to prominence in the legal field.

About the Organizers

Established in 1996, the Nanning Arbitration Commission (also known as the Nanning International Arbitration Court, or NIAC) is the sole civil and commercial arbitration institution in Nanning, authorized by the Nanning Municipal People's Government in accordance with the Arbitration Law of the People's Republic of China and under the unified deployment of the State Council. In July 2020, with the approval of the Nanning Municipal People's Government and for the record of the Department of Justice of the Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region, the Nanning International Arbitration Court was formally established to undertake international commercial arbitration functions.

NIAC is comprised of experts and distinguished professionals from various fields, including law, economics, trade, construction, and finance. Its panel of arbitrators includes esteemed professors, researchers, senior economists, certified public accountants, engineers, lawyers, and judges, as well as specialists with extensive experience in arbitration, litigation, and economic governance. The team also includes scholars and experts from sectors such as banking, securities, real estate, international trade, and science and technology. This highly qualified roster ensures the fair, efficient, and impartial handling of a wide range of arbitration cases.

In recent years, NIAC has achieved steady growth, with a year-on-year increase in the number of cases handled, placing it among the leading arbitration institutions in China in terms of caseload. The scope of cases includes disputes involving real estate transactions, construction projects, commodity trading, equity transfers, finance, transportation, property management, manufacturing, and service contracts.

Parties to these cases originate not only from mainland China but also from Hong Kong, Macao, and Taiwan, as well as international jurisdictions such as Cambodia, Indonesia, Australia, Canada, Japan, and the British Virgin Islands. NIAC's commitment to professional excellence and high-quality service has earned widespread recognition and trust from its clients, contributing to its strong reputation and positive image in the legal and commercial communities.

The 2nd Asia ADR Summit promises to be a remarkable and unforgettable gathering of global minds in the field of Alternative Dispute Resolution. However, this Summit will only reach its full potential with the strong support of the international ADR community.

We are currently seeking supporting organizations to help us:

- Spread the word about the Summit,
- Send representatives to participate,
- And explore opportunities to sign Memoranda of Understanding (MoUs) with like-minded institutions during the event.

We are also welcoming sponsors, whose invaluable contributions will enable us to deliver the Summit on the scale and impact we envision. Without your generous support, this ambitious initiative cannot be fully realized.

If your organization is interested in collaborating, sponsoring, or being part of this landmark event, please contact us at:

 thesecretariat@aiadr.world

Let's work together to make the 2nd Asia ADR Summit a resounding success.

We look forward to hearing from you!
